The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Burke (5581591). Burke teaches (figures 5-11) an x-ray system comprising an x-ray tube having a cathode 12, anode 16, electrostatic deflection plates 102/108 120/124/126 for steering an electron beam from the cathode to the anode, focal spot position sensing means 128 and control circuits 110/130 for applying voltage to the plates so as to adjust focal spot position. Lines 65-67 of column 6 explain that magnets may be used instead of electrostatic plates. With respect to claim 3 it is noted that a focal spot is not a structural element and cannot exist without a cathode and anode.

Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Gard (5550889). Gard teaches (figure 3) an x-ray system comprising an x-ray tube having a cathode 70, anode 45, magnetic deflection coil 41 for steering an electron beam from the cathode to the anode, focal spot position sensing means 62 (x-ray detectors 16) and control means 58 for applying current to the coil so as to adjust focal spot position. Lines 17-22 of column 4 explain that focal spot position may be determined by measuring temperature. With respect to claim 3 it is noted that a focal spot is not a structural element and cannot exist without a cathode and anode.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 10 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gard as above. Gard teaches to determine focal spot position by measuring temperature, but does not mention specific temperature sensors. Infrared cameras are known to be responsive to heat images, and it would have been obvious to employ them in the Gard apparatus as they are inexpensive and accurate.
